APPLEGATE VALLEY
OREGON WINE COUNTRY

Wine Country,
the way it should be.

Applegate Valley Wine Country has been attracting notice. It wasn’t always that way. The wine writers and critics used to pass over it in favor of larger and better-known places.

Wine lovers now praise our remote location and small producers as our greatest assets. In the Applegate, you can enjoy tete-a-tetes with winegrowers, humble tasting room fees, and wines that reflect the land—rather than the latest market trend.

Local winery manager Craig Camp puts it best: “In the Applegate Valley, we make wines that have something to say.”

Uncorked WINE BARREL TOURS

Every May and November, Applegate wineries host delectable eats and wine tastings at this self-paced wine tour event. Tickets include a commemorative Wine Trail wine glass.

A Thriving AVA

Recognized as premier wine country since the mid-1800s when Renaissance man Peter Britt nurtured the first winegrapes in nearby Jacksonville, the Applegate’s viticultural spirit has overcome many obstacles. Prohibition, skeptics, its far-flung location, and all of the heartaches of farming. Thanks to the enduring efforts of the early pioneers and the vision of our current winemakers, the Applegate Valley wine country is what it is today: a thriving AVA with over 18 wineries for your enjoyment.

A Wine for All Seasons

The Applegate has a pleasant year-round Mediterranean climate. With over 70 varieties of grapes, there are wines to pair with every season. A crisp Vermentino after a summertime hike? A spicy Tempranillo to warm your autumnal soul? A floral rosé for the spring? And don’t forget winter, when abundant sunshine might make you crave something sparkly for the holidays.

“Many good, even extraordinary, wines are now created in an America that most of us never see.”

WINE SPECTATOR

In the end, a tour of Applegate Wine Country will deepen your understanding of wine’s relationship to the soil, or as the French put it, ‘terroir.’

Valley.

Meet the Winemakers

Inside our small wineries, you’re bound to meet the winemaker. They can tell you about their singular wines and vineyards—how the Tempranillo varieties grow best in silty-loam soil, how Viognier thrives in river-wash, or how Syrah ripens best on the pland benches. They may tell you about the biodynamic and regenerative farming techniques that enrich their vineyards. You might even hear the story of how they found their way to the Applegate Valley.

Rustic Refinement

What makes the Applegate the Applegate? Find out by setting off on a country cruise along Highway 238. Weave past veggie farms, grazing cattle, old barns and lazy stretches of river. Delight in roadside wildflowers, antique trucks and occasional handmade signs for fresh eggs, locally-grown corn—even handmade chocolate.

Well-spaced throughout this casual paradise: our tasting rooms. While away an afternoon vineyard-side in the good company of residents, travelers and the winemakers, add to the scene live music, enchanting wines, and locally-procured nibbles and you have a brand of rustic refinement that is distinctly Applegate.

“The swilling tourists are just beginning to arrive.”
